Demise of Brooklyn Veteran During Campaign a Loss to New York Democracy—Regarded as a Student of Human Nature—Survived by His Aged Mother—Was for Long Time a Foe of Murphy and Tammany.

"I'M WORN OUT."

"Gentlemen, I know what you have come here for. There is no need for a consultation. I knew I was dying when I walked into this hospital the other day. I have diagnosed my own case lying here. The trouble with me is that I have an old, worn-out heart, and an old, worn-out stomach. If you gentlemen could furnish me with a new heart and a new stomach, there might be some chance for me to get well. But the day of miracles has gone by."—Statement made by Mr. McCarren to his doctors.

New York, Oct. 23.—Senator Patrick H. McCarren died at 1:05 o'clock this morning. All hope had been given up several hours before. At a few minutes before 1 o'clock Dr. Peter Hughes, the senator's personal physician, came downstairs, where the senator's relatives and friends had been called to wait for the word that he was dead, and told them that it was possible that the senator might live an hour, but that the probability was that he would last but a few minutes longer.

At 11:30 o'clock Rev. Father Zimmer, of the Church of the Holy Trinity, had been summoned to the senator's bedside and remained with him a few moments. Senator McCarren already had received the last rites of the church. Father Zimmer prayed with the dying man, and then came downstairs to wait with the others for the last word.

All the relatives of the Brooklyn political leader who were able to be with him were at the hospital at the time. His aged mother was not able to be moved from her home, where she has been ill for some time.

Relatives Are Present.

The nephews and nieces were among those who waited in the public rooms of the hospital. The senator's confidential man, Christopher Dalton, who has been at the hospital night and day since the senator was operated upon, was at his bedside when he died. Dr. Hughes had remained with the senator all day, and left the sick room only to bring word to those downstairs, returning immediately to the bedside.

Toward the end the senator suffered a great deal of pain. He was conscious and realized that it was a matter of but a short time at most that he had to live.

His spirit, which took him through the first days of his sickness, following the operation, had broken during the past forty-eight hours, and, although still brave and ready, and willing to fight if any chance were given him, he saw there was no use, and that the end was inevitable.

He expressed this belief both to Dr. Hughes and to Comptroller Metz, who called upon him earlier in the evening.

AND A Foe OF MURPHY

Senator Patrick Henry McCarren, who was sixty years old on the 12th, was the absolute master of Brooklyn Democracy since 1867, when he overthrew the old leader, H. H. McLaughlin. He had been a power for twenty years, but with the fall of McLaughlin he was no longer a power.

GOV. CAMPBELL THERE

Agitator on Platform Tries to Appear Unconcerned.

President Points Out Evils Resulting from Too Much Legislation. Believes Capital Should Make a Reasonable Profit on the Investment—Mystery of Silk Hat Episode Is Explained and All Is Well.

Gregory, Tex., Oct. 22.—"I am not in favor of drastic legislation against railroads, except such as is necessary to keep them within the law and to keep their rates reasonable."

"The truth is we want to encourage our railroads. We will rush, 30,000 of us, in a county, to vote bonds for a railroad if it only will come in. Then it comes in, and after a time you won't find a friend of that railroad in that county, except, perhaps, the local counsel. Then you will proceed to legislate and you will do injustice to that railroad, but after a while, after you have done injustice to the point where you don't get the proper accommodations and where you drive them into a system of economy that does not build up your county, you finally begin to realize that the only good policy, as well as the only honest policy, is a square deal to the railroad so as to give them the rates they ought to have and not allow popular prejudice to deprive them of reasonable profit on the investment, including the risk that they made when they went into the business."

In these words President Taft paid his respects to the anti-railroad agitators at Corpus Christi this afternoon. Seated on the platform with him was Gov. Tom Campbell, of this State, who was elected on an anti-railroad platform and who has been one of the very best State agitators. The big audience applauded the President's statements, while Gov. Campbell was engaged in studying the heavens and trying to look uninterested.

Solves Silk Hat Mystery.

The President in the course of his Corpus Christi speech solved the Texas silk hat mystery. It is a matter of history that Gov. Campbell appeared in El Paso at the Taft-Diaz meeting with a stovepipe on his head. He announced then that it was the first time he had ever submitted to such an indignity, but boasted, with the perspiration streaming down his face, that he would stay with it through the day if he died in the attempt.

GEN. REYES HAS DISAPPEARED

Sensation in Mexican Government Circles Over New Turn in Affairs.

Anti-Diaz Party Believes Leader Has Met with Foul Play—May Be on Way to Texas.

Mexico City, Oct. 22.—The biggest sensation in government official circles since the political unrest over the Vice Presidential campaign began was caused to-day by dispatches from Monterey that Gen. Bernardo Reyes, governor of the State of Nuevo Leon, who is alleged to be responsible for various attempts at revolutionary uprising on the part of his ardent supporters, has disappeared. It was generally reported that Gen. Reyes would leave Monterey last night for the capital to hold a conference with President Diaz. It is known that Gen. Jose Moria Mier, subsecretary of war, has been named by President Diaz to succeed Gen. Reyes as governor. Gen. Mier will reach Monterey to-night.

Gen. Reyes is said to have mysteriously disappeared from his home in Monterey last night, and the military, under Gen. Geronimo Trevine, commander of that military zone, have been unable to find any trace of him, the dispatches report. It is thought that Reyes may have gone into seclusion in some mountain retreat adjacent to Monterey.

The Reyes supporters are very much excited over the disappearance of their leader, some of them declaring openly that he has met with foul play. It is considered probable that in order to prevent being held a prisoner in this city he is making his way overland to the United States border.

HEARST INVADERS
BROOKLYN WARDSIndependent Candidate for Mayor at His Best.

BANNARD SEES VICTORY

Murphy Scoffs, but Admits Tail of Ticket in Danger.

Hearst Makes a Hit with Brooklynites by Favoring Subways—Republican Candidate Claims to Have Inside Tammany Figures Conceding Loss of Borough Tickets—Cooper Union Speakers Roast Gaynor.

New York, Oct. 22.—William Randolph Hearst carried his majority campaign in earnest into Brooklyn to-night.

His first talk to-night at Plaza Hall was an open invasion into the heart of Senator Patrick H. McCarren's district, the Fourteenth assembly. The large hall was filled with an audience that waxed enthusiastic when the candidate himself appeared.

John Purroy Mitchell, candidate for president of the board of aldermen of the fusion ticket, managed, with the help of other speakers, to hold the audience until Hearst arrived nearly an hour later.

Hearst at His Best.

The independent candidate for mayor was at his best. He was greeted with vigorous applause and cheering, and it was several minutes before he could make himself heard.

Mr. Hearst's bid for Brooklyn votes was made by him saying that he was heartily in favor of subways and all of the proposed routes to Coney Island.

The candidate was signally temperate in his references to "this aged friend Gaynor," confining his remarks to Judge Gaynor's statement that he did not know where Tammany Hall was, and to his failure to have "the infamous Judge Rosch" taken from the Tammany ticket.

From Plaza Hall Mr. Hearst went to Arlon Hall, which is also in Senator McCarren's bailiwick. He repeated the same speech there to an audience that filled the big hall. From there he went to Congress Hall.

Tammany Loses Hope.

"I shall be elected," Candidate Bannard said to-day. "There is no doubt of it. Tammany, from information which I have received, has no hope of electing any of its candidates, except Judge Gaynor, and the organization is fighting the hardest to save the head of the ticket. I am not speaking merely for effect. My information that the Tammany leaders do not expect to carry their borough and county tickets is perfectly reliable. Hearst will poll a large number of votes, but he will not make the run he did four years ago. I'll win."

Representative Bennett, who is managing Mr. Bannard's campaign, said to-day that reports he had received from the districts showed that there was no doubt of the election of the Republican candidate.

When Charles F. Murphy was told of these statements he professed to take them as a joke. He thought that Gaynor would have a plurality of about 75,000, and that the county ticket would win by at least 15,000 to 20,000.

Gaynor the Limit.

Job Hedges and Mr. Ivins hired the biggest hall to say could find—Cooper Union—to say to-night that Gaynor was the limit.

Occasionally Hearst and Bannard came into the discussion. Hedges said he was for Bannard, but Hearst was a mighty good man.

Ivins said that Hearst was already elected, but he did not want to be understood as reflecting in the slightest degree upon a very worthy citizen, Mr. Bannard. And Hedges bowed and smiled to Ivins, and Ivins bowed and smiled to Hedges.

FLASHLIGHT AIDS HUSBAND.

New Method of Obtaining Evidence in Divorce Cases.

Honolulu, Oct. 16 (via San Francisco, Oct. 22).—Flashlight photography is to play an important part in a suit by H. Cooper against C. Bolle, a wealthy man, by alienating the affections of Mrs. Cooper, who is a local wine broker, suspected his wife of infatuation for Bolle, so he announced he was going away for several days. Instead of doing so, he hired a photographer, with orders to have flashlights ready.

He and the photographer went to the Cooper home about midnight. The camera man set up his apparatus and had his flash ready when the husband broke into the house. He took a flashlight picture, the result of which satisfied the husband, and he had Bolle arrested.

Bolle alleges that the incident was worked up for blackmail, but he couldn't explain his presence in the broker's home.
